

HALAL CERTIFICATE

WHAT IS USED FOR

The Halal Certificate is a document that guarantees that products and services aimed at the Muslim population meet the requirements of Islamic law and therefore are suitable for consumption in both Muslim-majority countries and in Western countries where there are significant population groups who practice Islam (France, Germany, United Kingdom, Spain).

WHO PREPARES IT

The Halal Institute under the standards dictated by the Islamic Council. There are several institutions and organizations around the world providing Halal Certification Services.

TO WHOM IT IS ADDRESSED

To importers, retailers and consumers who practice Muslim religion.

PRACTICAL ADVICE

Halal Certification is a process which ensures the features and quality of the products according to the rules established by the Islamic Council that allow the use of the mark Halal.

It is mainly applied to meat products and other food products such as milk, canned food and additives. Specifically, for meat products certifies that the animals were slaughtered in a single cut, thoroughly bled, and their meat have not been in contact with animals slaughtered otherwise and, especially, with pork.

This certificate is requested primarily for marketing and selling food products in Arab countries and other countries like Germany, France, Spain or Malaysia where there are large groups of people who practice the Muslim religion.

To obtain the certificate an audit has to be done in the factory of the company, with analysis of production systems, quality, sample tests and final products, as well as evaluation of staff involved in the production procedures. The fees are set as a fixed amount for the registration, inspection and analysis, and a variable fee, which is set as a percentage of the sales of certified products made by the company.

Products that are Halal certified are often marked with a Halal symbol, or simply the letter M (as the letter K is used to identify kosher products for Jewish population).
